WORK OF COUNTY MILITARY BOARD

First Selects for Special Service Under New Ruling Leave for Texas—Fulton's Share of 95,000—Ruling in Regard to Active Farmers—Called for Physical Examination.

Under a recent ruling of the War Department providing that registered men who are qualified may be inducted into service to meet special needs of the government, two Fulton county men, Henry J. Schlegel of Archbold, and Lawrence D. Griesinger of Delta, were called as expert auto and gas engine mechanics this week and started Tuesday for Kelley Field, San Antonio, Texas. The Aviation section of the Signal Corps is at present in need of 10,000 skilled mechanics, auto mechanics, engine repair men, gunsmiths, chauffeurs, carpenters, blacksmiths, electricians, etc. The men are sent to San Antonio for segregation by trades, followed by a brief course of instruction at flying fields or factories; then organized into squadrons mostly for service overseas.

Fulton county's quota of 95,000 men called to report at cantonments during the five days following March 29, is just 12. The following men have been selected to fill this quota and will leave Wauseon on March 29 or later, for Camp Sherman:

FULTON COUNTY RED CROSS NOTES

The County Red Cross rally held at the Court House last Friday was the source of much benefit and inspiration. Despite the bad roads every branch and auxiliary except one was represented. About 75 remained at the court house for a social hour, between the morning and afternoon sessions. Judge Wolf and Mr. Perry and Mrs. Martin were the speakers of the morning, while Mr. Crossman and Mrs. Robert Morris gave the addresses of the afternoon to a capacity house. Mr. Crossman spoke on the need of food conservation and Mrs. Morris urged that women put aside the frills and superficialities of life and get down to a basis of helpfulness and understanding in order to make the most of the opportunities offered by the war.

Judge Wolf received a telegram on Monday of this past week from F. E. Abbott, Development Director of the Lake Division, asking that our county speed up work on hospital supplies sending them as soon as finished to the Division warehouse at Cleveland. More women are needed at the workrooms to carry out this order.

Applications of men in service to the number of 542,527 for allotments and allowances have been approved by the War Risk Department of the U. S. Treasury. The majority of our first have the means of standing firm and fighting our battles for us, and that the second is not weakened by lack of funds. A failure in either place means that all may be lost. That our fortunes down to the third and fourth generation must supply the tribute which will be levied by the Kaiser would be God.

Luckily, the government has arranged the Liberty Loan so that we can pay for the war by lending the money, saving our lives and our fortunes and actually adding to the latter, at the same time and with the same thought. No question about it, or argument. Watch us. It's our war and we'll see it through.

THE YOUNGEST SOLDIER
Mr. F. W. Moyer is in possession of a series of photographs which show the "youngest soldier in America." Mr. Moyer is justly proud of the pictures, for they represent his grandson, James Wilson Reynolds, aged 3 1/2 years, in full khaki uniform, even to the "Sass Parrot" belt and garrison cap, standing at perfect attention. James Wilson is the son of Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Reynolds, and he is now on duty with his mother in Chicago, while his daddy is serving as Captain Reynolds of the Medical Officers' Reserve Corps at Fort Logan, Little Rock, Ark.

CANTATA
Next Sunday evening, March 24, the C. E. Society of the Christian church will render a special program entitled "The Challenge of the King."

I still have a few J. J. Deal spring wagons carried over from last year, at a splendid low price.

WE MUST BACK THE BOYS
It's our war. There has never been any question about that since Woodrow Wilson planted the standard of American democracy on the cliffs of France, and a united nation pledged itself to fight until the debt we owe the world and our own firesides has been paid.

The mad man of Europe was after us. He and his hordes whose intellects have been perverted until they worship the wildest as a god, accept his murderous dictates as unquestionably as if handed from the clouds, graven on tablets of stone by the finger of the Almighty Himself.

Kaiser-crazed Germans were upon us. Reluctantly we chose the only road to our safety. This is to kill America's so-called wild beasts.

To the sacred cause of ridding the world and our country of their menace we have pledged our lives and our fortunes. The majority of us must stay behind the lines. Our lives are safe if two things do not fail—our lines in France, and our lines at home.

It is our business to see that our first have the means of standing firm and fighting our battles for us, and that the second is not weakened by lack of funds. A failure in either place means that all may be lost. That our fortunes down to the third and fourth generation must supply the tribute which will be levied by the Kaiser would be God.

Luckily, the government has arranged the Liberty Loan so that we can pay for the war by lending the money, saving our lives and our fortunes and actually adding to the latter, at the same time and with the same thought. COMING SPEAKER

Gus. Ohlinger, President of Toledo Commerce Club, to Speak in Wauseon March 28—War Time Luncheon Serving Purpose for Which Intended.

One hundred and twenty-six men gathered about the tables in the K. of P. dining hall last Thursday evening to enjoy the fourth war-time luncheon served by the ladies of the Wauseon Temple Pythian Sisters. The luncheon, like its predecessors, was more nearly a banquet than a luncheon in fact, it seems as though the ladies were endeavoring to make each succeeding luncheon just a little bit better than the preceding one. Following the luncheon, President Harris introduced Mr. Greiner, representative of Camp Sherman, for the moving picture, "The Remaking of a Nation."

Mr. Greiner gave a short talk descriptive of the picture and its purpose, and thanked the Boosters' Club for their co-operation in bringing the picture to Wauseon. Later, Mr. Greiner favored the men with a patriotic song followed by a ragtime encore.

The guest of honor and the speaker of the evening was Mr. Donovan, president of the Toledo Fuel company, who spoke of "Our Neighbor on the North." Mr. Donovan gave a very complete description of the form of government in Canada and showed wherein Canadians enjoy as democratic a form of government as do the citizens of the United States. He spoke of the long boundary line between the United States and Canada, and referred to the fact that the Canadians went into the European war to aid Great Britain and France voluntarily, and that they could not be, nor were they coerced by the British government.

On Thursday night of this week the men were addressed by Attorney Eugene Rhinehart of Toledo, and zest was given to this luncheon by the presence of Fayette business and professional men, who were in Wauseon to show its men how to play basketball for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Next Thursday evening, March 28, Mr. Gus. Ohlinger, president of the Toledo Commerce Club, who has won for himself a place in the public esteem of this nation by his efforts to secure the rescinding of the charter of the German-American Alliance, will be the guest of honor at the luncheon, and will give an address following the luncheon, at the court house, so that the general public may have an opportunity of hearing him. It is expected that about sixty Liberty Loan salesmen will attend this meeting and this meeting bids fair to be the most successful of the series thus far; though every one has been successful in accomplishing the purpose for which these luncheons were inaugurated, i. e., to bring the facts

"MA SWEET" AT ARCHBOLD

About a dozen persons from Wauseon attended the Red Cross Benefit entertainment last Monday evening at Archbold.

"Ma Sweet and all the Sweet Daughters" gave a very pleasing little comic musical to a well filled house. There were in addition some very fine musical numbers given by younger people. The Basket Ball team proved that they could sing until the "Cows Come Home" and a quintet of High School girls dressed as Red Cross nurses, gave some very dainty and creditable musical numbers. Altogether the entertainment was a decided success and reflected credit upon the ability and patriotism of the women of Archbold.

Archbold is planning to hold a carnival for the benefit of the Red Cross in the new garage building in the near future.

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND
Recent letters received from Lawrence Bonnell, 472d Aero Squadron, P. O. Box 12, at Archbold, Ohio, where in England at the present time and quite likely to remain there for some little time. He writes of attending the service of the American article. England held in an abbey, which was erected in 907 A. D. English tobacco he says is not fit to smoke and he looks for one of the American articles. Writing under date of February 25th, he says: "Today England starts on a rationing system to give every one an equal share of the rationing will be glad doubtless to hear from any of his Wauseon friends. Address Private Lawrence Bonnell, 472d Aero Squadron, A. E. F., via New York.

From the heroic part played by Joan d'Arc in the ancient struggle of France to make of its life a nation, Mrs. Morris drew by analogy the place which women of the United States are called to fill in this present war.

Mrs. Morris' program for women in the present crisis was thorough and complete she left no possible work that women could do in the war untouched she was searching and scathing in her denunciation of those women who are too lazy, or who are unwilling to do their share of the work in order to do the work that women must do to win this war for humanity. A work that involves woman's heart, her brain, her tongue, woman's best weapon—her tongue.

We believe we are safe in saying that no body of women ever listened to a message so inspiring, and withal practical address than did the women who listened to Mrs. Morris last Friday afternoon.

Women of Wauseon and of Fulton county have been working with their heads, hearts, hands, and voices, but there are some who have not yet awakened to the magnitude of the task which the nation has undertaken, or the vital necessity for the work which they can do if they will.

Mrs. Morris' message was indeed a timely one, for there is no doubt but that the women who heard her and the men as well will devote themselves more earnestly than ever to the work which the present crisis calls upon them to perform and the sacrifices that it calls upon them to make.

Mrs. Morris was followed by Mr. Charles Crossman, who came direct from Washington as the representative of Herbert C. Hoover, the head of the National Food Administration. Mr. Crossman brought home to his audience the absolute and vital necessity of conserving every last ounce of food and of bringing the production of food supplies up to the highest possible point. Not only must we feed ourselves and the vast army of men in training and in service; this nation must feed the allies and armies, and help to feed England and Italy with their armies.

Mr. Crossman's talk was direct and positive and showed conclusively that

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT
Life in our town is not especially exciting these spring days, along in the middle of afternoon, when the sun is high and the air is warm, much for the idle to do but maintain the perpendicular position of the exterior walls of the buildings that are exposed to the sun; or sit down the hitching rails that might be drawn out by the early spring heat. But Monday afternoon a change was brought about. In less than 60 seconds by the marsh's stop watch, the walls were left to support themselves, the hitching rails were left to their lonely fate and the entire force of the Wauseon Reserve Corps was mobilized at the intersection of Beech and Fulton streets.

It took a team of mules, a load of coal, an interurban car and the psychological moment to bring all this about.

The mules drew the load of coal on the T. & I. track just west of the Beech street intersection on Fulton street. The interurban car west bound reached this vicinity just as the load of coal was turning off from the track, and right here the "psychological moment" arrived; the right hand front wheel of the wagon crashed down, the mules stopped; so did the load of coal, and so did the interurban car.

The "Reserves" immediately mobilized about the scene of wreckage and proceeded to give directions in regard to moving the wagon; the mules were guilty of insubordination; the community of general got their orders twisted; the coal was heavy and the T. & I. car was behind its schedule; but finally a drawing bar was produced by the T. & I. Engineering Corps, one end attached to the T. & I. car and the other end placed against the hind end of the coal wagon—coal mules and all, pushed out of the way. The psychological moment was past—gone forever—but it furnished some diversion while it remained.

GOOD FOR CHESTERFIELD
At the Box Social held at Chesterfield Centralized School last Saturday evening, March 16th, for the benefit of the Red Cross, the net receipts aggregated $87.50. Albert Linehan, the "Red Hater Auctioneer," came 16 miles, bought a box for $3.50, and then auctioned it off gratis.

INSPIRING ADDRESSES

People of Wauseon and Vicinity Hear Epoch Making Addresses at Red Cross and Teachers' Meetings Friday and Saturday—Mrs. Morris, Mr. Crossman, and Mr. Bassell Bring Messages of Practical Value.

Fulton county citizens had a rare opportunity offered them last Friday and Saturday, when the Red Cross Chapter on Friday and Boards of Education and teachers on Saturday held all-day meetings.

The Red Cross meeting proved to be a veritable rally of Red Cross workers of the county. New interest was awakened at the forenoon session in the Red Cross work among the juniors and the allied activities for boys and girls in the various clubs were presented.

The afternoon session was devoted to two speakers, who made a lasting impression upon the audience which filled the court room, until there was standing room only and not very much of it.

Mrs. Robert Morris of Toledo was the first speaker. Her theme was "Woman and the War." Her lecture was a masterpiece, and for more than an hour and a half she held her audience to close attention. In a manner that disclosed careful study and an intimate acquaintance with her subject, she drew a wonderful word picture of Joan d'Arc, her times, the country in which she lived, and the conditions which constrained her to the France of that century. In a wonderfully clear and concise manner, she outlined the marvelous career of the peasant maid who led the armies of France, from chaos to the organization that finally achieved the coronation of Charles, the Dauphin of France, as the King of France, in the Cathedral of Rheims which she had previously described as standing today in its ruined desolation as a monument to the barbarism and wanton destructiveness of the vaunted German Kultur.

From the heroic part played by Joan d'Arc in the ancient struggle of France to make of its life a nation, Mrs. Morris drew by analogy the place which women of the United States are called to fill in this present war.

Mrs. Morris' program for women in the present crisis was thorough and complete she left no possible work that women could do in the war untouched she was searching and scathing in her denunciation of those women who are too lazy, or who are unwilling to do their share of the work in order to do the work that women must do to win this war for humanity.
